Enabling solutions to facilitate commerce

Effective for transactions processed on or after October 16, 2015, merchants will be permitted to receive partial or full prepayment when items in a store are not immediately available or when the customer cannot take items at the time, but will be delivered or provided at a later date.

Typical Scenarios

Here are some examples when a Visa cardholder may have to make a partial or full prepayment.

A cardholder:
- Purchases a big screen TV in a store but is unable to take it at the time of purchase and requests that it be delivered.
- Wants to purchase a shoe that the store does not have in stock. The merchant offers to obtain it from another store and have it delivered to the customer.
- Purchases clothes at a retail store, but would like the pants altered. The store offers to alter the pants and make it available for pick-up or delivery to the customer at a later date.

Disclosure to Cardholder and Cardholder Consent

The merchant must provide, and the cardholder must consent to, all of the following in writing at the time of the first, or only, partial prepayment, or at the time of the full prepayment:

- Description of promised merchandise or services
- Terms of service
- Timing of delivery to cardholder
- Transaction amount
- Cancellation and refund policies
- Date and time that any refund privileges expire without prepayment forfeiture
- Total purchase price
- Any other charges (e.g., taxes)

1. Effective for transactions processed on or after 16 October, the terms Partial or Full Prepayment transactions replace the terms Delayed Delivery, Advance Payment Service (US only) and Advanced Deposit transactions.
2. For merchants in a face-to-face environment.
3. Where required by applicable laws or regulations, the merchant must also provide to the cardholder a record of the cardholder’s consent.
4. Also requires terms of final payment including the amount and currency.
